SAN FRANCISCO, CA. || June 1, 2020 – UrbanBCN Worldwide CEO David Uziel brings his company into the transcontinental air space with the introduction of his newly announced private aviation network, UrbanAir.

Uziel's initial jet acquisition reflects his commitment to meeting the growing demand for private travel in the wake of the global pandemic. In tandem with the company's launch of rigorous COVID-19-related health and safety protocols, UrbanAir intends to provide a proactive and competitive option for those seeking enhanced flexibility and care within the luxury charter arena.

"Time-saving access to smaller airports, adaptable flight schedules, and the ability to remain socially-distanced will be vital considerations in the coming months," says Uziel, "and these are things major airlines just can't provide. Our goal is to make air travel more streamlined, and our clients more confident, as we collectively move forward."

UrbanAir's access to more than 25 small, medium and heavy jets creates a range of accommodation options for passengers. All private charters are equipped with a multimedia entertainment system, forward galley with refreshment center, and in-flight wifi. Booking by phone or email.
